Taking Charge as Leader With Emotional Intelligence, Interpersonal Skills & Conflict Resolution Skills

Introduction

Let your career take a leap with Increased Emotional Intelligence, Heightened Interpersonal Skills and the ability to resolve conflicts.

Emotional Intelligence

Some people think emotional intelligence is more important thana person's intelligence quota. They would be correct. Although there is a link between high intelligence quotas and high emotional intelligence quotas, your intelligence quota helps you to learn new things, remember things and develop skills. Your emotional intelligence helps you to learn more about yourself and how you connect to other people. Emotional Intelligence is not so much about learning about new things, but rather about about feelings and emotions. The core of emotional intelligence is inter-personal interaction and intra-personal interaction. Emotional Intelligence is becoming more important in business as well. People who are aware of their EQ generally know how to act and react among different people. And the long and short of that is less conflict, more productivity.

Leadership Skills

Once you learn the techniques of true Leadership and Influence, you will be able to build the confidence it takes to take the lead. The more experience you have acting as a genuine leader, the easier it will be for you. It is never easy to take the lead, as you will need to make decisions and face challenges, but it can become natural and rewarding.

Interpersonal Skills

Some people are lucky and are born with the gift of the gab. The other 99% percent of us, have to really work on our people skills and our interactions with people if we are to impress and work with them. We offer a workshop on interpersonal skills and at the end of the workshop, participants will have left the caterpillar behind them and will float
